The article provides an overview of the development of the service for officially sealing correspondence and mentions that several stamp catalogs provide listings of these stamps, classifying them according to their date of issue and their characteristics. The article then proceeds to provide images and descriptions of six different types and corresponding subtypes of Cuban stamps for officially sealing correspondence and ends with images of several covers showing examples of their actual use.

("Search for the printer of the 1904 José Martí Cuban postal cards.")

BCFD, Yr,18, No.51, Jul-Sep 1986, pp.6-7, Span.

By comparing the design, lettering, card stock, and size of the José Martí postal cards with those of the Jefferson and Liberty cards issued during the U.S. Administration period, and based on information gleaned from an article published in the journal of the United Postal Stationery Society which he fails to identify, the author deduces that the same firm that produced those card also designed and produced Republic's Martí cards, namely the Oxford Paper Company of Rumford Falls, Augusta, Maine. Since the Republic of Cuba awarded the contract for printing the Martí cards to the American Bank Note Company, the author surmises that the latter probably subcontracted the actual printing of the Martí cards to the Oxford Paper Company. The author also assumes that the same company also printed the subsequent Carlos Manuel de Céspedes and José de la Luz y Caballero cards. The article is in response to an inquiry in the same bulletin (BCFD) of January-March 1985, page 5, by the Postal Stationery Commission of the Cuban Philatelic Federation under Question No.29, Part d, about the place where the Martí cards were printed. Part d, also inquired about the start date of circulation and whether anyone had seen any of these cards cancelled before January 16, 1905. Neither of the latter two questions is addressed by del Valle's article, which in general, is very poorly written.

The article contains an overview of the Cuban railway postal system as it evolved from colonial times and was later substantially modified and improved during the U.S. Postal Administration of Cuba, modeling it after the U.S. railway post office system. That system was basically maintained intact during the Republic with minor changes, such as the incorporation of cancellers in Spanish and the addition of new branches as the Cuban railway system was expanded.

Part 2 of a three part article about the railway post office system in Cuba. See <VALL1909> for Part 1 and <VALL2005> for Part 3. Part 2 covers the railway post office system established by and operating during the U.S. Postal Administration of the Island. The article gives an overview of the system followed by a list of the RPOs, distribution points and links with the RPO wagons, and service lines by coastal ships or river boats. In this last list there is a translation error in the column listing the frequency of the trips: 2 semanales is erroneously translated into English as "every two weeks" when it should be "2 weekly". Two different types of RPO cancellations are illustrated and described and several examples of the cancellations on covers and on piece are illustrated. Several of the illustrated cancellations are illegible and one is mislabeled (top one on page 18).

"Correo Ambulante por Ferrocarril en Cuba (Tercera Tres)"

CPa, Vol.30, No.89, May-Aug 2020, pp.8-21 (14), ill., Span. & Eng.

Part 3 of a three part article about the railway post office system in Cuba. See <VALL1909> for Part 1 and <VALL2001> for Part 2. Part 3 covers the railway post office system operating during the Republic period up to 1954 when the system ceased to operate, being replaced by trucks and airplanes. The article is basically a listing of RPOs followed by images of covers and cover fragments showing various RPOs. The RPOs in the list are numbered and so are the images; however, they don't seem to correspond. Moreover, the cancellations in most of the images shown are illegible, being either partial renditions or too fuzzy, or both. As a final observation, del Valle had sent me this article several years ago for publication in the Journal of Cuban Philately, but upon reviewing it, I came to the conclusion that it needed considerable rework to make it fit for publication, and set it aside. However, since the article contained valuable information, I used it to feed my "Listing of towns and cities appearing on railway post office (RPO) cancellations" (see <CUES-RPOs>) and stored some of the better images in my personal database of RPO images.

Report from a Cuban philatelist of the lack of perforations along the left and right vertical panes of the new Victory Stamps (Scott RA5, Edifil Sobretasa Postal No.5) and that there is an absence of gum along these vertical strips of unperforated stamps. The correspondent surmises that the Victory stamps that were printed on panes of 10 by 10 were perhaps perforated and gummed using machines made to fit the Tobacco stamps of 1939 (Scott 356-358, Edifil 330-332) which came on panes of 7 by 10. However the article does not verify this possible explanation for the noted varieties of the Victory stamps. The report concludes with a warning to collectors against fake Cuban overprints on U.S. stamps without providing any details.

Good study of the surcharged Giro revenues of 1883. The article notes the existence of only four types of surcharges applied to the regular 1882 bistre Giro stamps, similar to the surcharges applied to the regular postage stamps but with the value in the center replaced by a core of facing semicircles. One interesting item in the article is the mention of the existence of a pane of the stamps in the possession of the author from which he deduces that the setting for the surcharges was done in groups of 50 consisting of 5 rows of ten stamps. The author illustrates the setting of the 50 surcharges in the article. It is not clear, however, whether the pane in his possession is a pane of 50 or 100 stamps--if it is a pane of 100 it would have been key to state that the setting repeated in the bottom half of the pane. The article mentions that the surcharges are apparently symmetrical in the four cardinal directions but with minor variations which can be identified upon careful examination. This assertion is incorrect because the symmetry only exists in two directions, the surcharges being rectangular, not square. The article goes on to note varieties in the printing of the four denominations of the surcharges consisting of missing or broken letters or numerals. Another interesting observation is that it appears that the surcharges were printed separately from the word GIRO above them and the values of the surcharges below them. The article ends by mentioning the existence of forgeries of these surcharges and classifies them into two types, providing identifying characteristics for each, and commenting that they are quite rare.

"CUBA: Tres 'Primeros Días' poco conocidos" ("CUBA: Three Little Known First Day Covers")

BNJ, No.12, Oct 1984, pp.3-5 (3), ill., Span. with English summary in p.20 (paraphrased below).

Report of three little known first day ceremonies held during the early 40's. The first was the inauguration of the "Postal Trolley Cars" in the city of Havana on 25 January 1942 providing mail boxes located in trolley cars along routes that passed through the main post office in Old Havana where the mail was retrieved and posted. Covers placed in the mail boxes the first day of the service received a special cancellation. The second event was organized by the Cuban Society of Pigeon Lovers and was a onetime race of pigeons carrying messages attached to their legs from the town of Colón to Havana. The event took place on 21 December 1941 and those messages that arrived safely at Havana were placed into specially prepared envelopes commemorating the occasion. It is interesting to note that the FDC shown has a cachet that reads "Pigeongrama--Ayude a las Democracias" ("Pigeongram--Help the Democracies") and a large bold "V" (for Victory) in the center of the cover, both promoting support for the allied war effort in Europe. The word "pigeongrama" is a blatant "anglicism" and of no relation to the war effort--a case of poor judgement by the designer of the FDC. The third event commemorated was the first use of radiosonde balloons to make meteorological observations. This system was inaugurated by the Cuban National Observatory on 8 September 1944 and commemorative covers were prepared for the occasion (none were carried on the balloon since it was not meant to be retrieved).

Account of a visit to the Cuban Postal Museum in La Habana in February 1998 with detailed listing of the major exhibits on display at the museum. The most interesting part of this piece is that the author indicates that upon questioning the museum's staff about the existence of additional material not on display, he was told that there was none, in spite of the fact that he made them aware that at the international exhibition held in Madrid, Spain, in December of 1997, he had seen material on display that was not currently being exhibited in the museum. The author surmises that the museum staff probably was unaware of the existence of additional material in the museum's holdings.

Historical overview of the 1861-62 Spanish expedition to México led by Spanish General Prim that led to the occupation of the port city of Veracruz for about four months from December 1861 to early 1862. The Prim expedition was launched from Cuba and stamps then in use in Cuba (Scott 12 & 13) were both carried privately by the soldiers and officially by the expeditionary forces for use in the correspondence of the soldiers. The Spanish troops occupied the Veracruz post office from where mail from the soldiers was routed to their destinations in Spain, France, and México. The article focuses on the postal rates that applied to the various known destinations, the various types of cancellations and other postal markings used, and shows images of most of the known covers, fragments, and pieces with significant examples of the cancellations that were used.
